

Innovative rocket science gives boost to near-space missions

June 18, 2017

Innovative rocket science gives boost to near-space missions

by Bryce Tappan

Scientists at Los Alamos National Laboratory, which has a long history of developing propellants as part of the nuclear weapons program, have developed a unique segregated fuel oxidizer rocket fuel system for CubeSats.

This story first appeared in the Santa Fe New Mexican.

Managed by Triad National Security, LLC for the U.S Department of Energy's NNSA